If your friend is fond of books, why not give him or her this library, made up of the best of the whole world's best books? It is the most handsome as well as the most valuable and satisfactory present that $31 will buy, and only $1 to be paid until after the Christmas strain is over. We send the entire library to your home on 10 days' approval. Obviously it must stand the most critical examination or we could not afford this.

If you would know the real character and scope of this International Library glance through a partial list of its authors. Each of them has written something that you want to read—and would if you had it convenient and knew just what it is. The Library brings it to you in clear print, large type and good paper—10,000 pages of it, with over 500 full-page illustrations—the very best reading for your every mood—and it saves you time, money and useless labor. But this list is less than one-half—picked out at random from

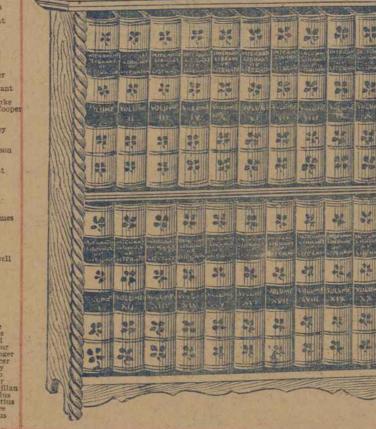

The International Library.

You cannot spare the time to read all of the 54 books that Virgil wrote, nor perhaps his masterpieze, the Æneid, which is in a number of books, but the fourth book—the poet's acknowledged best effort, the gem in the cluster of Virgil's literary jewels, the very climax of his art and genius—you would like to read. That the Library gives complete. Nor can you read all of the 118 prose works and 326 poems of Scott, but you do want to read him at his best—and it is in the romantic that he excels. There he has embalmed his very soul and mind. It is just this that the Library gives.

So it is with all great writers. Each has an environment in which he is the happiest; a realism which is his very life; a style in which he is the most natural. And it is these best works of all the great writers of every age and clime that have been selected by the foremost scholars in the world; DONALD G. MITCHELL (whose introduction is an epitome of all literature); ANDREW LANG, the eminent English writer and critic; NATHAN HASKELL DOLE; FORREST MORGAN, CAROLINE TICKNOR and others equally prominent. You will always have good reading within easy reach in the Library. Sometimes the poets, essayists and humorists will attract you; then again the historians, orators, novelists and playwrights. Again you will renew old acquaintances—Homer, Anacreon, Sappho, Thucydides. At another time men within your own recollection—Lowell, Holmes, Curtis and Wendell Phillips, or perhaps the famous men of letters to-day—Kipling, Bunner, Bourget, Sienkiewicz. You will find them all in the Library—one of books, but the fourth book—the poet's acknowledged best effort, the gem in the cluster of Virgil's literary jewels, but the library jewels, but the fourth book—the poet's acknowledged best effort, the gem in the cluster of Virgil's literary jewels, but the library jewels and 326 poems of Scott, but you cannot be in the cluster of Virgil's literary jewels, but the library jewels and 326 poems of Scott, but you cannot be clustered.
